

Regarding cell phone use on airplanes: As a flight attendant for over ten years, I feel very qualified to comment on this. First of all, we police enough issues at the moment: Carry on bags, proper stowage of various items, all safety issues already in effect by the FAA, people trying to light their shoes on fire or attack the cockpit. The next thing I would like? Adding in 100+ various conversations happening simultaneous while I try and do this. Or perhaps , the 'road' rage that would commence when people in 2 rows in either direction don't want to listen to another passengers conversation!! who is pressuring the FCC for this to pass?